VI. WHAT IS MONEY LAUNDERING?

Money Laundering may be defined as the cleansing of dirty money obtained from legitimate or illegitimate activities including drug trafficking, terrorism, organized crime, fraud, and many other crimes with the objective of hiding its source and rendering it legally usable form. It is any act or attempted act to conceal or disguise the identity of illegally obtained proceeds so that they appear to have originated from legitimate sources. The process of money laundering involves creating a web of financial transactions to hide the origin and true nature of these funds.

This is done in three phases - the Placement Phase, Layering Phase & Integration Phase.

- i. Placement Phase - The placement stage involves the physical movement of currency or other funds derived from illegal activities to a place or into a form that is less suspicious to law enforcement authorities and more convenient to the criminal. The proceeds are introduced into traditional or non-traditional financial institutions or the retail economy.
- ii. Layering - The layering stage involves the separation of proceeds from their illegal source by using multiple complex financial transactions (e.g., wire transfers, monetary instruments) to obscure the audit trail and hide the proceeds.
- iii. Integration Phase - During the integration stage, illegal proceeds are converted into apparently legitimate business earnings through normal financial or commercial operations. Having identified these stages of the money laundering process, financial institutions are required to adopt procedures to guard against and report suspicious transactions that occur at any stage.

VII. ANTI-MONEY LAUNDERING (AML)PROGRAM:

The objective of having an AML Program is to have adequate policies, practices, and procedures in place to help prevent money laundering. Such practices would include the following:

VIII. CUSTOMER DUE DILIGENCE PROCESS:

The main aspect of the policy is the Customer Due Diligence Process which means to:

- a. Obtain sufficient information to identify persons who beneficially own or control securities accounts. Wherever it is apparent that the securities acquired or maintained through an account are beneficially owned by a party other than the client, that party should be identified using client identification and verification procedures. The beneficial owner is the natural person or persons on whose behalf a transaction is being conducted. It also incorporates those persons who exercise ultimate effective control over a legal person or arrangement. See Annexure 1 for more details.
- b. Verify the client's identity using reliable, independent source documents, data and information. Where the client purports to act on behalf of juridical person or individual or trust, the registered intermediary shall verify that any person purporting to act on behalf of such client is so authorized and verify the identity of that person.

Provided that in case of a Trust, the reporting entity shall ensure that trustees disclose their status at the time of commencement of an account-based relationship.

- f. Reviewing the Due Diligence measures including verifying again the identity of the client and obtaining information on the purpose and intended nature of the business relationship, as the case may be, when there are suspicious of money laundering or financing of the activities relating to terrorism or where there are doubts about the adequacy or veracity of previously obtained client identification data; and

- g. To periodically update all documents, data or information of all clients and beneficial owners collected under the CDD process such that the information or data collected under client due diligence is kept up-to-date and relevant, particularly for high-risk clients..
- h. No transaction or account-based relationship shall be undertaken without following the CDD procedure
- i. To register the details of the client, in case of being a non-profit organization, on the DARPAN Portal of NITI Aayog, and maintain such registration records for a period of five years after the business relationship between a client and the company has ended or the account has been closed, which is later.
- j. If the Company is suspicious that transactions relate to money laundering or terrorist financing, and reasonably believes that performing the CDD process will tip-off the client, it shall not pursue the CDD process, and shall instead file a STR with FIU-IND.

Consequences of non-furnishing of information

Where Employees are unable to apply appropriate CDD measure/KYC measures due to the non-furnishing of information and/or in cases where it is not possible to ascertain the identity of the client or the information provided to is suspected to be non-genuine, or there is perceived non-co-operation of the client in providing complete information, such situations should be brought to the notice of the Designated Principal Officer (PO).
